Apranga is a Lithuanian group and a leading fashion retailer of many brands of clothes, footwear and leather goods in the Baltic states. Apranga's new premises close to Vilnius were completed in 2018 and comprise both a logistics hall and an administration building. High quality and energy efficiency were Apranga's criteria for the building.

Ruukki supplied energy panels for the building and steel lamellas for a fence bordering the nearby residential area.

"Ruukki's product support is good and both data and personal help are available when needed," tells architect Andrius Juodpulis at the architect office of JP architektūra.

Ruukki's designer made a detailed plan of the number of panels needed.

"The service was really good and meant we didn't need to spend time learning in-depth about the panels. This gave us more time to spend on creative work, which is what we are best at," enthuses Andrius Juodpulis.
