The new head office of media company Alma Media is situated in downtown Helsinki, next to Finlandia Hall. The five-story building has space for approximately 500 employees of the company. Apartment buildings are also included in the complex.

The new head office enjoys a prime location and shapes the Helsinki cityscape. A steel frame enables the construction of versatile premises that blend architecturally into the cityscape.

Ruukki is responsible for the design and manufacture of the steel frame.

Ruukki's steel structures enable the use of a variety of large window surfaces. Also, protruding steel beams don't interrupt the continuity of long facade shapes." - Project manager Heikki Schemeikka from Lemminkäinen Talo Oy
